Distinguishing Features

An out of shape man of 53, wearing thick glasses and old-fashioned suits, TOMESCU cuts an unimpressive figure, looking like a mid-level bureaucrat.

Motivations

Conflicted by his involvement in disastrous experimental work at Porton Down, TOMESCU believes that much could have been salvaged from his research, had his material survived.

The death of Emily TOMESCU devastated him. He has been observed to talk to his deceased wife as if she were still alive and is obsessed with finding her. Close monitoring is advised.

Known History

Formerly employed by the Nazis in 1944-45, he was extracted by the SIS from the clutches of the shadowy Soviet GK-II organisation in 1957. TOMESCU escaped his native Romania and was spirited into BERB's Porton Down experimental facility, where he met and married his wife, Emily.

Principal researcher in the GOD LIGHT project, his research was cut short when the device was trialled to combat the Soviet invasion with disastrous results. TOMESCU narrowly escaped with his life as the RAF destroyed Porton Down in Operation INDIGO DIAMOND. He learned that his wife was missing presumed killed in the fighting taking place in SW England shortly after.

Political pressure following the INDIGO DIAMOND debacle forced TOMASCU out of BERB and he was 'seconded' to SSG along with the SIS agents who initially spirited him out of Romania, Carol ASTOR and Simeon URQUHART.

Opinion of Colleagues

Sgt Bill MCINTYRE: A man of action. He looks down on your poor physique.

PC Frank BURTON: A nice young man, someone you would ask directions of.

Carol ASTOR: You owe her a lot but she blames you for her stalled career.

DS Vic WELLING: Another policeman, very cynical.

Possessions

- Old-fashioned and well-worn suit and scuffed shoes
- .38 Webley revolver, heavy and clumsy
- Ration card and SSG identification papers
- Notebook and pencil, stuffed full of your ideas to carry on your GOD LIGHT research.
